Dear David:

I hope this finds you well and that your summer has been a productive one.

We have had to change the format of several sessions in our upcoming conference on the Holocaust, including the session in which I previously had asked you to serve as a respondent. In the interest of time we shall be foregoing your response, although, please be assured that there will be ample opportunity for your participation in the discussions following the two papers.

The conference continues to shape up very promisingly and I think we can all look forward to three days of intensive work. I look forward to seeing you in Bloomington. I would like to extend all good wishes for the New Year.

Sincerely yours,

Alvin H. Rosenfeld
