A classic story from the treasure trove of Jewish folklore, "The Dybbuk" has in it all the elements of great theatre—plot, drama, passion, color, music and dance. Steeped in the mystic lore of the Kabbalah and Hassidism, the story of the love between Channon, a poverty-stricken, brilliant talmudical scholar and Leah, daughter of a rich merchant, — a love whose consummation is prevented—penetrates to the very soul of life itself and signifies man's attempt at establishing in the world a sense of justice or balance.

Chayele Grober, director of the production, has brought to the cast a wide experience in the theatre, and particularly her association with the original production of "The Dybbuk". Miss Grober was one of the founders of the Habimah Theatre Group in which she was a leading actress. The English version of "The Dybbuk" used for the Hillel Theatre Players is based upon an adaption for the stage by the well-known playwright and TV producer, Mac Shoub, of Montreal.

Members of the cast include Eva Roskies as Leah, Dave Gurberg as Channon, Kenny Wolfe as the Messenger, Arlette Blaustein as Freda, Brian Silcoff as Meyer, Michael Givon as Sendor, and Seymour
